Careers in Deaf Studies & American Sign Language

Deaf Interpreter Training Deaf Studies Interpreter Training

Communication with a purpose

SIGN LANGUAGE INTERPRETERS facilitate communication between people who are deaf or hard of hearing and people who can hear. Sign language interpreters must be fluent in English and in American Sign Language (ASL), which combines signing, finger spelling, and specific body language. A career as an interpreter might be right for you if you are a good communicator and enjoy working with people.

Seattle Central Community College has three distinct programs of study for those interested in working with deaf populations:

Deaf Studies A two-year program of intensive study in American Sign Language and Deaf culture.

Interpreter Training Prepares students to facilitate communication between deaf and hearing people using English and American Sign Language.

Deaf Interpreter Training Certificate Program Prepares individuals who are deaf to work as interpreters for the deaf population and the deaf/blind population.

Deaf Studies

Earn an Associate of Arts (A.A.) degree with a focus on Deaf Studies, 90 credits.

- Students may begin any quarter.
- The Deaf Studies program may be a good fit for you if you plan to transfer to a four-year university and use your sign language skills to enhance a career in teaching, social work, counseling and others.
- Areas of study include American Sign Language, along with Deaf culture, English, and intercultural communication.
- Graduates work in vocational rehabilitation settings, early childhood education, and social and mental health agencies. Program graduates also work in public schools, colleges, and companies where their sign language skills can be utilized in conjunction with other job skills.

Interpreter Training Program

Associate of Applied Science Transfer (A.A.S.–T) degree, 94 credits.

- Students can begin in fall quarter only.
- The interpreter training program may be a good fit for you if you enjoy working with people and have good communication skills in both ASL and English.
- Areas of study include ASL interpretation, transliteration, comparative linguistics, survey of hearing impairment and American Deaf Culture.
- Graduates are prepared to work in any setting to facilitate communication between Deaf and hearing individuals. Interpreters are routinely employed in educational settings, as Video Relay Service interpreters, in the theatre, in legal and medical settings, and as platform interpreters.

Deaf Interpreter Training

Certificate program, 76 credits.

- Specifically designed for deaf individuals to work as interpreters for the deaf population and the deaf/blind population.
- Students accepted in fall quarter only.
- Deaf interpreter training may be a good fit for you if you are deaf, have good communication skills and enjoy working with persons who have special needs.
- Areas of study include interpreting, applied interpreting, ASL theatre, comparative linguistics and intercultural communications.
- Graduates are prepared to work as deaf interpreters in colleges, public schools, or as freelance interpreters. Deaf interpreters also work in vocational rehabilitation settings, early childhood education, and social and mental health agencies.

“Demand for American Sign Language interpreters will grow rapidly, driven by the increasing use of video relay services, which allow individuals to conduct video calls using a sign language interpreter over an Internet connection.”
