

Women's Programs

Room 202

Fine Arts Building (SE corner of Harvard & Pine)

206-587-3854

Website: <http://seattlecentral.edu/womens-prog/>

Email: WomensPrograms@sccd.ctc.edu

For Our Neighbors in the Community

We offer a stimulating lecture/discussion series and a Women's Resource Center providing assistance in identifying and reaching your educational and career goals.

For Low-Income Parents

Women's Programs offers special services and support to low-income parents, who want to get into school, stay in school and prepare for a job with a future.

We also offer special short-term training programs and financial aid for parents currently receiving TANF (Temporary Assistance for Needy Families). For more information, please call 587-3854.

For "Special Populations" Students

If you are low-income, a single parent, or displaced homemaker, we may be able to offer you special services in exploring careers in our professional/technical field, and in entering and completing any of our professional/technical programs.

For All Seattle Central Students

We have the information you need about resources at Seattle Central and in the community to become a successful student! Come by our office in room 202 of the Fine Arts building to check out our employment listings, scholarship information, information on community resources and organizations, volunteer/internship opportunities in women's organizations and our collection of books, magazines and articles about Women's Studies, health care, job search, reproductive rights and political issues.

Every Thursday from 10:00 - 12:00PM, an outreach worker from the King County Public Health Department is available at the Women's Center to help students apply for free or low-cost health insurance for themselves and their children, and financial assistance with electric and water bills, for those in need.

Please call (206) 587-3854 for other community resources available at Women's Resource Center.

We also sponsor student activities and organizations including:

The Women's Forum publication features essays, stories, poetry, art and photographs by and about women students. Students have an opportunity to participate in organizing, editing, producing and distributing the Forum. Come by and pick up a free copy of the latest issue!

Women in Science and Engineering (W.I.S.E.) offers information, support and guidance to women students studying math and science. W.I.S.E. provides speakers, scholarship information, field trips and support, which will prepare women for the transition into math, science or engineering departments at four-year institutions.

EMPOWR: Empowerment Means Political Organization for Women's Rights! Join us in studying the impact of legislative issues on women, and learning how to be effective in the political arena.

The V-Day Committee – Come be a part of a global movement to stop violence against women and girls. Seattle Central students can help increase awareness and raise funds for anti-violence organizations in Seattle, through various creative events and activities.

Women in Society
Noon Lecture Series
Wednesdays from 12:00-1:00PM
Room BE1110

Join us for our lively weekly lecture and discussion sessions focusing on a wide range of issues of concern to women. Quarterly lecture schedules are available in FA202 of the or on our web site.

This lecture series is offered in conjunction with HDC 190: Women in Society, for 2-credits (registration code 3975; see the course description under the Human Development Courses in this bulletin). For more information, call the Women's Program Coordinator, Kelly Grayson, at (206) 587-3854.